Office Kovacs

OFFICE KOVACS is a design studio based in Los Angeles. OFFICE KOVACS works on projects at all scales from books, exhibitions, installations, interiors, homes, speculative architectural proposals and public architecture competitions. The recent design work of OFFICE KOVACS includes a proposal for a dog park in downtown Los Angeles, a honorable mention in the MALI design competition for a new contemporary art wing in Lima, Peru, and the renovation of an airstream trailer into a mobile retail store that travels the Pacific Coast Highway.

ANDREW KOVACS is an Assistant Adjunct Professor at UCLA Architecture & Urban Design where he teaches design studios and seminars at both the undergraduate and graduate level. From 2012-2013 Kovacs was the inaugural UCLA Teaching Fellow. Kovacs studied architecture at Syracuse University (Bachelor of Architecture), The Architecture Association in London, and Princeton University (Master of Architecture). Kovacs' work on architecture and urbanism has been published widely in the architectural press including A+U, Pidgin, Project, Pool, Perspecta, Manifest, Metropolis, Clog, Domus, and Fulcrum. Additionally, Kovacs is the creator and curator of Archive of Affinities, a website devoted to the collection and display of architectural b-sides. In 2015 Kovacs published the book Architectural Affinities as part of the Treatise series organized and sponsored by the Graham Foundation in Chicago.
